BEAT CHAUFFEUR AND RAN TAXICAB INTO EAST RIVER

Two Strikers, Picked Out at Meeting by Victim of Assault, Arrested.

West | Fifty-second street, and Nathan Schwartz, of No. 448 East Seventy-third street, both striking chauffeurs of the were ready to prove an allbi. A third man, was engaged in the assault and cab theft, but has not been arrested.

Scidel was standing in front of the Freundschaft Club at Seventy-second street and Park avenue shortly after 8 o'clock last night when he received a call to the home of Dr. H. B. Hall, No. 107 East Sixty-fifth street.

As he brought his cab to a halt in Son of the President-Elect Chief Victim Had Gone Into Basement front of Dr. Hall's house three men sprang on him. He was dragged from his cab and beaten unconscious. Mr Hall-came to the door just as the three men leaped on the cab and drove off.

The cab turned down to Sixtieth street and went with all possible speed toward the river. A block from the river two of the men leaped from the cab. The third stuck to his seat until the cab was almost on the edge of the precipice. Then he made a flying leap, and as the cab dived into the water he and his companions took to their heels.

wrecked. A few minutes later Mr. Hall telephoned he had Seidel at his house sician. He saw Leahy and pointed him out to the detectives. That's one of the men," he said.

A few minutes later Seidel caught sight of Schwartz and said: 'There's another of them."

Seidel looked over the meeting of strikers for half an hour, but was unable to pick out the third man.

In the court, the two prisoners said they had an alibi, but Magistrate Corrigan said he felt satisfied that no mistake had been made in the identifications and he held them in bonds of $1,500 each for further examination Satthird man rounded up by then.

SPRINTING HENS TIE UP BRIDGE TRAFFIC

Trains Wait During Chase After Poultry Escaped From Market Wagon.

Several policemen standing at the Manhattan end of the Williamsburg Bridge about 9 o'clock this morning were startled to observe a big, black rooster perched on top of a swiftly moving wolley car. Then they saw half a hundred persons running around near the centre of the bridge, where the air appeared to be filled with roosters, hens, ducks and turkeys.

One policeman, quicker than the others, was just about to stop a duck from lumping off the bridge when a yellow-looking hen lighted on his hel-

"Help!" cried the bluecoat, thinking that he had been marked for slaughter.
"Back up, feller," came a voice from "I've got that hen in my clutches. What are you afraid of?"

The man who addressed the frightened policeman was the driver of the poultry wagen. He had climbed to the railing ong the side of the bridge after a red ropster, but the rooster got away. There were forty chickens, ducks and tinkeys loose, each running about as fast as it could. Several trains were stopped, while trolley cars were blocked several minutes. The driver of the poultry wagon, which is owned by Hance Brothers, of Washington Market, gave up in despair after recovering dozen hens, and resumed his journey.

Shoppers.

Cooing contentedly in the midst of flannels and fluffs a two-weeks-old infant was turned over to the city nurse in Brooklyn to-day by Policeman James Carlin, of the Adams street station. It was this mite that caused a tie-up of traffic in Fulton street, Brooklyn, late yesterday, when the policeman picked it up on the stoop of a frame house at No. 435 Gold street, and on his way to the station found himself in the midst of a throng of women shoppers.

The baby's feet were bare of shoes and stockings, but a long white dress was swathed about them. The infant's head was covered by a silk string cap and a cord coat and heavy flannel petiticoat warded off the wind.

"Where did you get that child?" asked a sympathetic shopper.

"Glye it to me!" said another.
